

Kapstream Absolute Return Income Fund

March 2019

Performance	Month (%)	3 Months (%)	1 year (%)	3 years (%) p.a.	5 years (%) p.a.	Since Inception <sup>1</sup> (%) p.a.
Portfolio (gross) <sup>2</sup>	0.70	1.51	3.55	3.81	3.85	5.42
50% Bloomberg AusBond Bank Bill Index & 50% Bloomberg AusBond Composite 0-3 Yr Index	0.34	0.82	2.52	2.20	2.44	3.54
Active return (gross)<sup>3</sup>	0.35	0.68	1.04	1.61	1.41	1.88

1. Fund inception 31 May 2007
2. Gross returns exclude impact of ongoing management fees. No allowance is made for tax.
3. Numbers may not add due to rounding
4. Benchmark performance includes the RBA Cash Rate until 31 January 2014.

Performance

The Fund returned 0.64% in March and 1.33% over the first quarter (after I shareclass fees). Coupon income remained the main contributor to Fund returns, with corporate holdings also aiding as corporate spreads continued to rally. Long interest-rate positions in Australian, US and New Zealand rates also contributed positively to returns as rates rallied strongly.

Global bond yields fell as central banks telegraphed a more dovish set of economic expectations and removed forecasted rate hikes. The Fed's new "dot plot" now shows virtually zero 2019 hikes and rates peaking at 2.6% in 2020. For the first time in 12 years, the US yield curve inverted (from three months to 10 years), potentially signaling a future recession. Headline March payrolls came in at a strong +196k jobs, but annual wage increases slowed to 3.2% (from 3.4%), signaling little inflationary pressures.

Australian 10 year government bonds fell to a record low of 1.72%, with markets now forecasting two rate cuts over the next year. Governor Lowe moved to a more neutral bias from a prior hawkish tilt, stating future rate moves were more evenly balanced. The ECB announced another round of long term repos, citing weaker manufacturing and geopolitical risks of Brexit and trade tariffs (particularly in the car industry).

Despite negative economic sentiment, global equities continued to rally with the US S&P up 1.8%, FTSE up 2.9%, China up 5.1% and the ASX up 1%. Commodities were mixed with oil up 4% and iron ore down 0.6%.

Brexit and the US-China trade war continued to muddle along with no clear path to a resolution on either. These geopolitical risks, combined with little global inflationary pressure and central bank rhetoric moving toward a more dovish stance, allowed risk markets to perform well over the month and quarter.

Portfolio Strategy

We will continue to retain a higher level of portfolio risks believing, despite recent market volatility, that rates will remain low and corporate profitability will remain strong. We have maintained our low cash position at less than 5%, given attractive corporate issuance. We still believe the RBA is likely to maintain rates at 1.50% for some time, although market expectations have moved toward this view and are now even pricing in one to two 2019 cuts. We expect to maintain Australian and New Zealand duration in the 0.50 to 0.70 year range and US duration in the 0.50 year range for a total portfolio duration of more than 1 year, our longest duration position for some time. We had removed the portfolio's short US duration position in January amidst growing geo-political and economic risks, and expectations that growth will underperform current expectations. We still favour Australian and New Zealand rates given our expectations for their central banks to maintain low rates through 2019 and beyond, but US rates are also becoming more attractive despite recent rallies as the Fed nears the end of its rate hiking cycle.

Outlook

As we stated last month, February's 20,000 payroll gain was an anomaly and 200,000/month gains in coming months, consistent with the past few years, are likely. However, we still worry that a full-blown trade war and political gridlock could reduce US growth by up to 0.5% annually, completely unwinding the benefits of recent tax cuts.

Given a split Congress, significant policy changes are unlikely for the next two years and prospects for major infrastructure spending or tax and healthcare policy adjustments will be limited. Relaxation of regulatory reform will likely continue as the Democrat-held

House has limited authority in this area. Trade policy is also likely to remain unchanged with continuing trade war rhetoric, albeit with little political incentive for a solution, leading to a long, drawn-out saga with no near-term resolution. Immigration, health care and further tax reform are also off the table over the next two years.

While we foresee eventual rises in service sector inflation, goods inflation will remain well contained, being less linked to decreasing US unemployment. Global spare capacity will continue to make cheap imports a viable alternative to domestic products, although a trade war's tax on consumers may limit imports' effects. We expect unemployment to move beyond its near 50-year low, to the mid 3% level by year-end. Wage pressures are becoming a concern, with average hourly earnings increasing to 3.2% and the ratio of job seekers to number of available jobs moving from 9:1 toward 1:1. Whilst core inflation may slightly elevate given increasing wage pressures, it will remain well contained in the 2.0% to 2.5% over the next few years.

In global bond markets we continue to favour Australian rates versus the rest of the world. We had been more dovish than market consensus in terms of the future path of short-term rates, but markets now price in one to two RBA rate cut over 2019 and we are becoming more neutral to that view. Housing and labour markets will remain key factors in future growth and inflation expectations and we expect the RBA will await further data before acting. Australia's property downturn continues to deepen, but the employment story remains relatively robust. 270,000 jobs were added in 2018 and reconfirm the continuation of 2017's strong employment data when 400,000 jobs were added. Tougher lending standards as regulators crack down on risky lending, while long-term positive, will keep house prices under pressure over 2019.

Chinese growth will remain key for Australia and we remain optimistic despite a deceleration in credit provisions and a looming trade war. Chinese GDP remaining near 6.25%, in line with targets, remains our base case, despite the trade war rhetoric. We expect continuation of an agenda supporting the addition of 10 million people/year into the urban labour force as a central economic policy theme whilst financial sector reforms will remain an important yet secondary policy goal.

Solid Chinese and Asian growth, employment gains (particularly the recent gains in full-time hiring) and improved terms of trade provide for a solid Australian domestic story. We foresee a continuation of the string of 27 years of recession free growth. However, non-mining investment, an overlevered consumer, housing market stress and a lack of wage growth will cause the RBA to tread carefully.

We continue to hold a positive view on investment grade credit in Australia, largely due to attractive real yields, healthiness of issuers compared to other developed markets, and wider yield spreads versus comparable US, Euro and Japanese issuers. Therefore, our portfolios continue to have material exposure to Australia, currently at about two-thirds of our holdings. Favoured sectors remain the banking sector due to attractive yields and greater liquidity, and infrastructure such as airports and toll roads which offer attractive yields and solid cashflows, and are typically monopolistic businesses with high regulation and quality underlying collateral, of systemic importance. Whilst Australian banks came under further pressure with the revelation of a new bank tax, rating agency downgrades of 2nd tier banks and 1st tier hybrids, and disclosures in the Royal Banking Commission, we remain bullish on Australian senior bank debt given conservative business models, strong profitability and implicit government support. We have more recently moved out of Big 4 issuers into second tier financials including regional banks and credit unions in order to pick up additional yield.

Elsewhere, we like systemically important, highly rated Asian issuers such as government-related energy, telecom and banking entities and the US 'too-big-to-fail' banks, whose bonds should be supported by an increasingly robust regulatory environment focused on less risk taking and greater capital requirements.

We remain less supportive of European bond opportunities. Stresses in the Euro region have increased, particularly with the emergence of an Italian coalition government focused on decreasing taxes and increasing spending with little concern over growing deficits. With Italian risks increasing, we believe it will be difficult for the ECB to avoid further stimulus. We expect 2019 European growth and inflation to continue to underperform expectations amidst structural rigidities in labour and product markets, particularly in peripheral regions. Low/negative bond yields already reflect this scenario. It was not surprising to hear the ECB capitulated on its previous optimistic growth forecasts and now expect growth in the still unrealistically hopeful 1% region. Despite low growth, low inflation and easy monetary policy, we have found bond opportunities limited given low/negative yields and too great risks associated with higher-yielding investments. We expect to continue to avoid Europe, given uncertainty surrounding the Brexit campaign, low yields and limited corporate profitability. We remain concerned over the European banking sector, which had historically done little in raising new capital or writing down bad debts. Although this has improved somewhat with bank bad debt sales and continuing capital increases, stresses remain in the peripherals. While the ECB has the capacity to continue to paper over the problem in the shorter-run, balance sheet expansion will be the likely end result, at least before nationalization of weaker performing banks. This scenario may be many years away. In the interim, we expect QE to reappear, with little growth and inflation prospects in the Southern European region.

We have mainly avoided UK positions since the 2016 Brexit vote, believing we had little insight into the political decisions that will ultimately drive economic performance. We had been skeptical over the leadership's ability to deliver a workable Brexit solution and recent developments reinforce our view.

Contact Details

Courtney Chute - Portfolio Analyst, Kapstream Capital | Tel 02 9234 0009 | email: Courtney.Chute@kapstream.com

The information has been prepared on the basis that the Client is a wholesale client within the meaning of the Corporations Act 2001 (Cth), is general in nature and is not intended to constitute advice or a securities recommendation. It should be regarded as general information only rather than advice. Because of that, the Client should, before acting on any such information, consider its appropriateness, having regard to the Client's objectives, financial situation and needs. Any information provided or conclusions made in this report, whether express or implied, do not take into account the investment objectives, financial situation and particular needs of the Client. Past performance is not a guide to future performance. Neither Kapstream Capital ("Kapstream") (ABN 19 122 076 117 AFSL 308 870) nor any other person guarantees the repayment of capital or any particular rate of return of the Client portfolio. Except to the extent prohibited by statute, Kapstream, or any director, officer, employee or agent of Kapstream, do not accept any liability (whether in negligence or otherwise) for any errors or omissions contained in this report.